

Reviewing Startup Package and Value Sections

Reviewing the startup package spotlight

On the homepage of Sherkety ERP & Website Platform, scroll past the main hero area and look for the startup package section that highlights a featured offer. This spotlight is designed to give you the package name, a short headline, and the main reason the package is useful before you review the detailed breakdown below. If you already reviewed the top-of-page actions, use Understanding the Homepage Hero and Primary Actions as your reference for the earlier section and continue here with the package-specific content.

Start by reading the most prominent text in the package spotlight. This usually includes the featured package name and a short value statement that explains who the package is for or why it stands out. The package price is typically one of the largest items in this area, so it is easy to compare at a glance with the rest of the page. Look closely around the price for any nearby labels that add context, such as a highlighted offer message, a featured-style badge, or promotional wording that makes the package stand out from standard service listings.

You should also check the action buttons placed directly in this spotlight area. The page may show a WhatsApp action for quick questions and a Contact or inquiry action for a more formal request. These buttons are part of the package decision flow, so they appear before the detailed explanation sections on purpose.

Use this spotlight as your quick summary area:

- Package name
- Main headline or promise
- Price display
- Promotional or featured wording
- Primary contact actions

This section is meant to introduce the offer quickly. The detailed value breakdown, included benefits, and savings explanation appear further down the page and help you decide whether the package matches your business needs.

Understanding the value breakdown

After reviewing the startup package spotlight, continue down the homepage to the value breakdown section. In Sherkety ERP & Website Platform, this area helps you see what the package includes by separating the offer into individual parts instead of showing only one total price. This is where you move from “What is the package?” to “What do I actually get?”

Read each listed item carefully. The page may present the package as a group of included services, business setup steps, or deliverables. Each row, card, or value block helps explain what is bundled together. When individual values are shown next to these items, compare them with the full startup package price shown in the spotlight. That side-by-side presentation is important because it shows why the package is offered as a bundle rather than as separate purchases.

As you review the section, pay attention to how the numbers are grouped. The page may use a subtotal, a combined total value, or a final package amount to explain the difference between buying items separately and choosing the startup package. The visual layout usually makes this comparison easy to scan, with item values listed first and the package total emphasized nearby.

Focus on these questions while reading:

- Which services are clearly included in the package?
- Are individual item values shown for comparison?
- Is there a combined value or total before the package price?
- Does the page clearly separate included items from anything not included?

[SCREENSHOT: Value breakdown section with included items and comparison between individual values and package price]

This section is especially useful if you are comparing the startup package with ordering services one by one. It gives you a clearer picture of the package structure and helps you understand whether the offer covers the business setup work you expect.

Checking included benefits and package coverage

Once you have reviewed the value breakdown, look for the included benefits area in the startup package section. In Sherkety ERP & Website Platform, this part of the page explains what support, assistance, or service coverage comes with the offer beyond the price itself. It helps answer a practical question: what is actually included when you choose this package?

The page may present these benefits in a checklist layout, icon-based rows, or highlighted feature blocks. Read each item one by one rather than scanning only the headings. This is often where you find the clearest explanation of package coverage, such as consultation, setup help, onboarding support, or other included service elements. If the page uses check marks, icons, or grouped cards, those visual cues usually indicate that the listed items are part of the package by default.

Be careful to distinguish included benefits from anything presented separately. Optional extras are often shown in a different group, outside the main checklist, or with wording that separates them from the core package. If a benefit appears in the main package block, it is usually part of the standard offer. If it appears in another section or with separate pricing language, treat it as something to confirm before you proceed.

When reviewing package coverage, look for details such as:

- Type of support included
- Scope of service provided
- Number of deliverables, if shown
- Whether onboarding or setup help is part of the package
- Whether any items are clearly outside the standard offer

This section is where the package becomes more concrete. Instead of only seeing a price and headline, you can judge whether the startup package includes the level of support and service coverage your business needs.

Comparing package price and savings presentation

The savings presentation is the part of the startup package section that helps you decide whether the offer is financially worthwhile. In Sherkety ERP & Website Platform, this area is usually placed near the package price or value breakdown so you can compare the final package amount with the higher total value of separate services.

Start by identifying the final package price. This is usually the most visually prominent number on the page. It may appear in larger text, stronger color contrast, or a more central position than the original total value. Then look for any comparison pricing nearby. The page may show an original amount, a crossed-out price, a savings label, or wording that explains how much you save by choosing the package instead of buying each service individually.

If a savings amount or percentage is displayed, read it together with the included items list. A large savings figure is only useful if the package covers the services you actually need. The page design often supports this comparison by placing the original value close to the final package price, making it easy to judge the difference without leaving the section.

Use the savings presentation to answer these questions:

- What is the final package price?
- Is there an original total value shown for comparison?
- Does the page show a savings amount or discount indicator?
- Is the final price visually emphasized more than the original total?
- Does the bundled offer fit your expected budget?

This section is most helpful when you are deciding between the startup package and separate services. It gives you a direct pricing comparison so you can judge whether the bundled offer matches both your budget and your business setup priorities.

Sending a WhatsApp inquiry from the package page

If you want a quick response while reviewing the startup package, use the WhatsApp button shown in the package spotlight or nearby inquiry area. In Sherkety ERP & Website Platform, this action is intended for direct package questions without making you fill out a full form first.

1. Scroll to the startup package spotlight or the package contact area.
2. Click the WhatsApp button.
3. Confirm that WhatsApp opens, either in the app or in your browser.
4. Check the message area before sending. If a message is prefilled, it may already mention the startup package or your interest in the offer.
5. Send your message and wait for a reply through WhatsApp.

Before you send the message, review any text that appears automatically in the chat box. If the page includes a prepared message, it helps connect your inquiry to the startup package so the business team understands which offer you are asking about. You can keep that message as it is or add a short question of your own.

Useful questions to send through WhatsApp include:

- Is the startup package currently available?
- Can the package be customized?
- What is included in the price?
- How long does the process take?
- What are the next steps to begin?

WhatsApp is the fastest option when you want clarification before making a decision. It works especially well for short questions about pricing, included services, timing, or whether the package fits your business situation. If you prefer a more detailed written request, use the contact action described in the next section.

Requesting more details through the contact action

If you prefer a more formal follow-up than WhatsApp, use the Contact button or inquiry form connected to the startup package section. In Sherkety ERP & Website Platform, this option is useful when you want to send a structured request and provide your details for a reply.

1. Click the Contact button or open the inquiry form from the startup package area.
2. Fill in the required fields shown on the screen.
3. In the message box, mention that your request is about the startup package.
4. Review your details for accuracy.
5. Click Submit or the form's send action.

If the form is shown directly on the page or in a pop-up window, complete the fields exactly as they appear. The most common contact fields are:

Field	What to enter
Name	Your full name
Phone Number	Your contact number
Email Address	Your email

Field	What to enter
Message	Your question about the startup package

[SCREENSHOT: Contact form opened from the startup package section]

In your message, be specific. Mention the startup package and ask about the points that matter most to you, such as pricing, included benefits, timelines, customization, or support. This helps the business team respond with the right package details instead of sending a general answer.

After you submit the form, watch for confirmation on the screen. Sherkety ERP & Website Platform may show a success message, thank-you notice, or another clear confirmation that your request was sent. If you do not see a confirmation, review the form for any required field you may have missed and submit it again.

Overview

The startup package area on the homepage of Sherkety ERP & Website Platform is designed to guide you from interest to action in a clear order. You first see the package spotlight, where the featured offer, headline, price, and contact actions are placed together. This gives you a quick understanding of the package before you spend time reading the details.

Below that, the value breakdown explains what makes up the package. Instead of showing only one price, the page may separate the offer into included services or deliverables so you can compare the combined value with the package amount. This is followed by the included benefits area, where support, setup help, onboarding, or other coverage details are presented in a checklist or feature-style layout. Together, these sections help you understand not only the price, but also the scope of what you receive.

The savings presentation then connects the package contents to the financial decision. By showing the final package price alongside the higher value of separate services, the page helps you judge whether the bundle is worth choosing. Once you are ready to ask questions, the page offers two clear paths:

- WhatsApp for quick, direct questions
- Contact for a more detailed request through a form

This section of the homepage works best when you review it in order:

- Spotlight

- Value breakdown
- Included benefits
- Savings comparison
- Inquiry action

If you are still working through the homepage from top to bottom, this package section builds on the earlier guidance in Understanding the Homepage Hero and Primary Actions by moving from broad first impressions into package-specific value and decision details.

Prerequisites

Before reviewing the startup package section in Sherkety ERP & Website Platform, make sure you are ready to browse the homepage comfortably and compare offer details without missing key information. You do not need admin access or any special account for this part of the website, but a few basics will help.

- Open the public homepage of Sherkety ERP & Website Platform.
- Scroll beyond the main hero section until you reach the startup package area.
- Be ready to compare the package price with any listed included items or savings details.
- If you want to contact the business immediately, have your preferred contact method ready:
 - WhatsApp for chat-based questions
 - Your name, phone number, email address, and message for the contact form
- If you are browsing in a non-default language, make sure the page language is the one you want before reviewing package details. For help with that, see Switching Languages While Browsing the Platform.

It also helps to know what you are trying to confirm before you open the contact options. For example, you may want to check:

- Whether the package fits your budget
- Which services are included
- Whether support or onboarding is part of the offer
- Whether the package can be adjusted for your business needs
- Which contact option you prefer for follow-up

If you are reading the homepage sections in sequence, continue next with Viewing Team and Ecosystem Highlights, which covers the trust-building content that appears after the package and value sections.
